GENERAL NEWS.

The Ute Outbreak.

WASHINGTON, October 13. The following is a communication from Agent Stanley, which led to the action taken by General Sherman and Secretary Schurz:

LOS PINOS AGENCY, October 8. Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Washington, D. C.

Employe. Brady and escort of the Indians have just arrived from White river. The Utes recognized and obeyed Ouray's order, withdrew and will fight no more unless forced to do so. If the soldiers are not stopped the trouble can be stopped by the peace commission to investigate offenses and let the blame rest where it may. This will save life, expense and distress if it can be accomplished.

LATER, 1:30 P. M.—A runner just from the southern Ute Agency with a letter from the agent says that a general council has been held. The Utes will obey Ouray's request. They will stay at home and take no part in the White river trouble and request Ouray to inform them of their decision.

[Signed] I. STANLEY, Agent.

I concur in the above. OURAY, Head Chief of the Utes.

ORDERS FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, October 13.—Secretary Schurz, immediately upon receiving a dispatch stating that the hostile Utes had retired, through the influence of Ouray, called at the war department, and consulted with General Sherman on the subject. General Sherman at once sent the following telegram to General Sheridan:

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY OF THE UNITED STATES.

WASHINGTON, October 13, 1879.

General F. H. Sheridan, Commanding Division of the Missouri.

"The honorable secretary of the interior has to-day called with a dispatch, telegram conveying the propositions for peace, which is communicated for your own information, and which should go for what it is worth. Generals Crook and Merritt, the latter on the spot, can tell if the hostilities have ceased fighting. If so, General Merritt should go in every event to the agency, to ascertain the actual condition of facts. All of the Indians who oppose must be cleared out of the way, if they resist. If they surrender their arms and ponies, they should be held as prisoners, to be disposed of by superior orders. The secretary of the interior will send a special agent at once to Ouray, who is believed to be honest and our friend. He may prevent the southern Utes from being involved, and the interior department can befriend him afterward by showing favor to some of his special friends, but the murderers of the agent and employes must be punished, and also those who fought and killed Major Thornburgh and his men. Please acknowledge the receipt of this."

W. T. SHERMAN, General.

In reply to the telegram from the Indian Agent Stanley, the secretary of the interior sent the following:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Oct. 3.

To Stanley, Agent, Los Pinos Agency.

Your dispatch is received. Tell Ouray that his efforts are highly appreciated by the government in view of the attack made upon the troops and massacre of the agent and employes. Troops will have to proceed to the White River agency. Ouray should endeavor to prevent any resistance to this movement. Troops are now in great force and resistance would result only in great disaster to the Indians. The hostilities will have to surrender and throw themselves on the mercy of the government. The guilty parties must be identified and delivered up. We shall see that no injustice is done any one. Peaceable Indians will be protected. Ouray's recommendations for mercy in individual cases will be respected as far as general interest may permit. Special agents are being dispatched to Los Pinos with further instructions.

[Signed.] SCHURZ, Sec'y.

NUMBER OF INDIANS KILLED.

BRAR RIVER, Colo., Oct. 11.—Via Rawlins, Wyo., October 13.—Indian reports brought in from the agency by Los Pinos Utes, say that 35 Indians were killed during the fight of the 29th of September, and the siege until October 5th the date of General Merritt's arrival.

WORD FROM MERRITT.

RAWLINS, October 13.—Lieutenants Burke and Schuyler arrived here this morning, and at last an authentic report is had of the doings of General Merritt and command since their march to the front. On the afternoon of the day on which he reached Captain Payne's camp he had a fight with the Indians. He had to move his camp about a mile from Payne's old position that night, on account of the stretch created by the dead animals. Merritt moved upon the agency, and reached there Saturday. The Indians are retreating southward and it is expected that in a short time they will drop into the various Ute agencies and thus covering up themselves, will never be known to who were the warriors who opened the battle on Thornburgh. The dismounted companies and wounded will be here in seven days.

ON THE WAY TO THE AGENCY.

RAWLINS, WYO., Oct. 13.—Mr. Emie Webb and George Fahr, two couriers, have just arrived from what was a few days ago the White River Agency. From them the following particulars were learned: General Merritt advanced upon the agency on the 11th. On his way he found many dead bodies. Among others he found the bodies of Carl Goldstein, an Israelite who left here with government supplies for the Utes at the White River Agency. He was found in a gulch six miles this side of the agency. He was shot twice through the shoulder and was about two miles from his wagon. A teamster named Julius Moore, formerly from Bainbridge, Mass., who was with him when he left here was found about one hundred yards from Goldstein with two bullet holes in his breast and his body hacked and mutilated with a knife or hatchet. As the command advanced through the canon they came to an old mine and in it was found the dead body of an agency employe named Dresser. He had evidently been wounded and crawled into the mine to die. His coat was folded up and put under his head for a pillow. Beside him hung a Winchester rifle containing eight cartridges. In one of his pockets a letter was found which as the courier can remember was as follows:

OFFICER'S LAST MESSAGE.

WHITE RIVER, September 29th, P. M.

MAJOR THORNBURG.—Will come with Chief Douglas and another chief and meet you to-morrow. Everything is quiet here and Douglas is flying the U. S. flag. We have been on guard three nights and will be to night, not that we expect any trouble but because there might be. Did you have any trouble coming through the canon? [Signed.] N. C. MECKER, U. S. Ind. Agent.

THE TERRIBLE SCENE AT THE AGENCY.

On entering the agency a scene of quiet desolation presented itself. All the buildings except one were burned to the ground, and not a living thing in sight except the command. The Indians had taken everything except flour and decamped. The women and children were missing and nothing whatever could be found to indicate what had become of them. They have either been murdered or burned or else taken away as hostages. Their dreadful and unmentionable fate calls forth the most profound sympathies. The dead body of Father Meeker was found about one hundred yards from his home lying on his back shot through the head. The left side of his head was mashed in with some blunt instrument. A piece of a barrel stave was driven into his mouth and one of his hands and arms badly burned. The dead body of Mr. W. H. Post, Father Meeker's assistant, was found between the buildings and the river with a bullet hole through the left ear and one under the ear. He, as well as Father Meeker, was stripped entirely naked. Another employe named Eaton was found dead. He was stripped naked and had a bundle of paper bags in his arms. His face was badly eaten by wolves. He had a bullet hole in his left breast. Frank Dresser, a brother to the one found in the coal mine, was found badly burned. He had, without a doubt, been killed instantly, as a bullet had passed through his heart. The bodies of Eaton, Thompson, Price, Eskridge, and all other employes not named, were also found. Eskridge was found two miles this side of the agency naked, and a bullet hole through his head. In the position occupied by the Indians during Thornburgh's battle, in a breast work made of stone, was found the dead body of an unknown white man, dressed in buckskin. He was sitting on his knees and had his gun in position to fire. He was shot through the forehead. From this it appears the Indians are not alone in their hellish work. The supposition is that the Indians have gone south to join the southern Utes, and the impression among the officers of Merritt's command is that the Indians who fought Thornburgh number at least seven hundred.

COLONEL MERRITT'S REPORT.

Colonel Merritt telegraphs military headquarters under date of October 11th substantially as follows:

This morning I moved down the river to a point near White River agency. The cavalry has been out all day in different directions looking for Indians and all report that the trails lead southerly to Grand River. I have no doubt the Indians have gone to the Uncompahgre agency. I expect Gibert and Henry to-morrow and will then move toward Grand River, leaving a guard behind. I have buried seven bodies, including Agent Mecker and three on the road. I am entirely in doubt respecting the force the hostiles can muster. It is clearly ascertained that all the Unintah Indians joined the Utes before Thornburgh's fight. If your orders are to go to the southern agency and fight what Indians we meet I shall be glad to carry them out but hope instructions will not be delayed." Colonel Merritt regrets exceedingly the great amount of military supplies furnished these Indians by ranchmen.

LAW YORK PRESS COMMENTS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The Herald discussing the Ute war says they have attacked our people, not only murdered individuals, but have made war against the United States. They appear to have done so without provocation. But even if they had suffered wrong their treaty with the United States bound them to peaceable remedies. It will not do now to say that after all they are entitled to former treaty rights. They have deliberately forfeited these. The government may if it chooses, settle them on their reservations. It may reinstate them in their former and forfeited rights; but it need not do so and in our judgment ought not to do so.

The Times thinks the unanimity with which Colorado have decided a general war imminent and that the yehinany of the country could put it down is a peculiar feature of the Ute war business. It says it has never been told why military authorities found their way into the reservation to watch prospectors of their danger and when straggling parties of these enterprising people broke cover and ran out in all directions, very much as rabbits run out of a burning forest, it was generally supposed they were fugitive missionaries. The Times mockingly concludes that it is marvellous the duty of congress to see that the Indians are exterminated with all possible tenderness.

Indian Question.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13. The Times correspondent travelling with Secretary Schurz says the latter informed the Indians at council in the Indian Territory that sooner or later the government would have to break the treaties in which it had guaranteed Indians possession of their land, also that Schurz will propose in his next report a law enabling Indians to obtain complete individual lands by long occupancy and then dispose of them at will.

Crimes.

FT. STOCKTON, October 13. On the night of the 7th inst., Wm. Lee, of Co. C, 25th Infantry, was shot, and instantly killed, by Wm. Turner, 1st sergt. Co. I, 10th cavalry, who surrendered himself to the commanding officer and was turned over to the civil authorities. The cause is unknown.

GALVESTON, TEXAS, October 13. The News special from Paris says J. J. Wheeler, editor of the banner, was shot dead this morning, by Wm. B. Bonner, attorney. Wheeler had preferred charges for removal against Policeman Clark, whom Bonner defended, and succeeded in getting acquitted, which appears to have incensed Wheeler. He several times threatened Bonner's life.

Another R. R. Accident.

CHICAGO, October 13.—A railroad accident occurred this evening at Maywood, on the Northwestern road, by which two men were killed and a number wounded. The cause was a collision between freight and passenger trains. Particulars later.

WASHINGTON, October 13. The case of Widow Oliver vs. Simon Cameron came up this morning. On motion to dismiss the Oliver counsel resisted on the ground that her impetuosity ought not to bar her from justice. The decision was reserved.

Rightly Held Responsible.

DETROIT, October 13.—The coroner's jury held an inquest to determine the cause of the falling of the grand stand in the Adrian fair grounds, by which fifteen lives were lost, and two hundred and seventy injured. It rendered a verdict late Saturday night, to the effect that W. L. Lawrence, owner of the stand, mayor, the architect, and E. H. Armstrong and Henry Armstrong, the carpenters who built the stand, were guilty of criminal negligence. All but the latter were arrested yesterday on the charge of manslaughter, were arraigned this forenoon, and pleaded not guilty; and were released on $3,000 bail. Their examination takes place on the twenty-second. A. H. Armstrong is not yet arrested.

Railroad Accident.

MILWAUKEE, October 13.—At eight this evening, while the switch engine in the yard of the Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad was making up the midnight freight, they started in the direction of the west yards. The fog was so thick that it was impossible to see but a few feet ahead, and the engineer did not discern until within a few feet of it that the bridge was turned for the passage of a vessel. The engine, tender, and a car of load plunged into the river. The engineer and fireman jumped from the engine. The former, Len. Rutter, was picked up out of the river, probably fatally injured. The fireman escaped with severe bruises about the legs; while Harry Hill, the telegraph operator, who was riding on the bumper of the locomotive, was thrown under the debris, and crushed into an unrecognizable mass. The switchman, who was standing in the engine also, jumped, and escaped uninjured. Loss to the railroad company, about $25,000.

Grant's Oregon Reception.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 13. An Astoria dispatch says that at seven o'clock this morning a gun from Fort Canby announced that the St. Paul had been sighted. The tug Canby having on board Gen. Greene, Major Throckmorton, Hon. W. D. Hare and reporters started from Astoria to meet the incoming ship. The St. Paul touched at 1:02 and the distinguished soldier was greeted with three rousing cheers, which he acknowledged with a bow. Mayor W. W. Parker and the city council of Astoria came aboard and were presented. Then Gen. O. O. Howard, with staff, accompanied by Maj. Wm. Gowener and Captain D. Hill came aboard by the invitation of Mayor Parker. General Grant went ashore; took his station on the stand on the wharf when Mayor Parker delivered a short address of welcome. Gen. Grant responded as follows:

"FRIENDS:—I am well pleased to again set foot on Oregon, and to receive in such a kindly manner. The scene is familiar. Every point of interest between Astoria and the Dalles returns to my memory. You have made great improvements. The hills do not look one-half so high as they did twenty six years ago. I have never, before set foot in Astoria. I have passed here eight times. There has been a great change, and I am glad to see it. I regret that my stay will be so short, as I would like to visit every portion of the north Pacific coast. It seems like returning home again. Thanking you for your kind and cordial welcome, I assure you it will be ever cherished in my memory."

The general shook hands with the crowd as it passed by in single file. The St. Paul left for Vancouver at 9:30, and the Lurline with General Howard and staff, Governor Ferry, the territorial officers, and the legislature, followed later, and passed the St. Paul six miles east of Astoria.

Another Bonanza.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 13. In explanation of the sharp rise in Union and Sierra Nevada this morning, a press dispatch from Virginia says that the south drift in the twenty-three hundred level of the Sierra Nevada is in eight feet of ore assaying five hundred per ton and has sixty feet to run in the Sierra Nevada. A ground official letter of the superintendent of the Sierra Nevada, written Saturday says that the face of the drift is in ore of good quality with streaks of very high grade ore running through it. Ore is also reported in the drift on twenty-four hundred level of Union corresponding to twenty-three hundred of Sierra Nevada. The Daily Stock Exchange to-day says that the excitement does not spring from professionally official announcements but from street reports and private telegrams concerning them.

NEW YORK, October 13. The Robinson men had a large and enthusiastic meeting at Cooper Institute this evening. Resolutions declared Kelly's candidacy simply a bargain to elect Cornell in return for the election of the Tammany local ticket.

Anti-Rent.

LONDON, October 13. At a great anti rent meeting at Novin, Ireland, yesterday, Parnell, a member of parliament, was enthusiastically received. Thirty thousand people were present, and scores of triumphal arches spanned the streets. During Parnell's speech, there were shouts in favor of shooting landlords. Sullivan, O'Connor Power, and another Sullivan also spoke. The last named declared that shooting landlords could do no good in the future; whatever it might have done in the past.

British Success in Afghanistan.

LONDON, October 13.—Special dispatches from Afghanistan contain the following:—The amir is strictly guarded in Sir Frederick Roberts' camp. General Roberts telegraphs that Afghan troops have been completely routed and the tribes who were assembled to fight have returned home. The heavy battery which is coming up with the Kyber column he says may go back to India as the heavy guns and howitzers originally presented by the British government to amir are in our possession complete. General Roberts visited Balahissarm the 11th instant and was to make a public entry into Cabul on the 12th instant. Most of the influential men of the city had paid their respects to Gen. Roberts.

A special dated the 10th from the British camp before Cabul says:—When the cavalry returned pursuing the enemy on the evening of the 9th they rode through Cabul. Some shops and bazars were open and people were sitting about all quiet. It is said that no quarter was given any one found firing upon the British and prisoners later in the night were shot. The leaders of the mutineers are the amir's most trusted friends.

SIMLA, Oct. 13.—Gen. Roberts' public entrance into Cabul took place at noon yesterday. He was accompanied by the amir and suite.

If the mayor of Colorado Springs don't care about the city's obligations, the citizens do.

Colorado Springs will honor her obligations according to the spirit as well as the letter of the laws.

The credit of this city until the passage of the "repudiation resolution" on Friday night was unstained. We ask our councilmen to wipe out this stain on Monday night.

Mr. J. H. Kellogg has been succeeded as the editor of the Hilltown Occident by F. W. Parmelee of Chicago. Mr. Parmelee is a young man of decided ability, as a newspaper man. We know he will be successful.

It now appears that the Indians are not likely to attack the settlers. They could have done terrible damage if they had chosen. They have thus far only attacked soldiers. This warfare certainly deserves respect at least.

The Tribune mentions some of the outrages of the Indians off the reservation in answer to eastern claims of incursions by the whites on the reservation. This is no answer. It simply shows that both have been doing wrong. The Indians can mention full as many outrages on their territory in the way of horse stealing, etc.

If the mayor wants a field in which to display his versatile legal knowledge, we advise him to turn his attention to the conviction of his former (we say former by courtesy) clients who are now engaged in violating the city ordinances in respect to the sale of liquor. He will then be more useful than in his legal assaults on the credit and honor of the city.

The citizens of Greeley on Friday night passed resolutions on the Indian raid. One of these read as follows:

Resolved, That we commend the humane views of our governor on this question, and his energy in trying to protect the lives and property of our frontiersmen. Did it refer to his dispatch to San Juan, which said, "Indians off their reservation, seeking to destroy your settlements by fire, are going to be hunted and destroyed like wild beasts." Send this word to the settlements.

It is unfortunate to have private railroad fights brought into politics. But this happened in the cases of Dick Wooten, candidate for sheriff in Animas county, and Mr. Price in Pueblo county. The former was beaten out of sight, while the latter was elected in spite of strong Atchison influences. This shows the strong sympathy of the people was with the Rio Grande side. They repudiated Wooten who would not serve the writ of injunction and rejected Price who served it so efficiently.

John D. Long, the republican candidate for governor of Massachusetts well summed up the republican belief when he said, "The republican party is committed to the doctrine of the national integrity; of a reformed civil service which shall be the service of the state, and not of a party; of equal citizenship; of the purity of the national ballot, enforced as the national government is bound to enforce, throughout its entire jurisdiction, every franchise it has constitutionally guaranteed to its citizens; of the preservation at once of every national and of every local right, not according that heresy which has disgraced the name of state rights, but exactly as both are parcelled out in the constitution, so that neither the national authority shall be impaired, nor any genuine right of local self-government compromised; and of that policy of specie resumption and honest finance, by its fidelity to which the republican party has preserved the national faith, has restored and strengthened public and private credit, has revived our industries, and has pointed and led the way to better times, better work, better homes."

DISHONOR AND REPUDIATION.

At the council meeting on Friday night a resolution was adopted which barring spelling was as follows:

Resolved, That each appropriation in the general appropriation bill for city purposes made March 21, 1879, be a separate fund, and that the city treasurer be authorized to procure the necessary books and blanks to open an account with each separate fund, and to pay no warrants except such as are drawn upon its separate fund.

By an accidental oversight we failed to have this resolution in our report of the meeting. When the import of the resolution was understood, it caused general indignation among our business men. At present there are about $16,000 in city warrants outstanding, the payment of which is indefinitely postponed. To use plain English our council has repudiated these warrants by refusing to receive them for taxes. They were issued with the understanding that they would be receivable for taxes, and for this reason only have been negotiable. The effect will be, as it ought to be, disastrous on the credit of the city. We dislike very much the spirit displayed by the gentlemen who are largely to blame for such dishonest legislation. The gentleman who now tries to fill the mayor's chair has said on our streets when asked what was to be done with the $16,000 in warrants now outstanding, "Oh they are in the hands of speculators and they can afford to wait," with some additional emphatic expressions which we don't care to repeat. We are happy to say that a man who while mayor can indulge in such flippant allusions to the obligations of the city does not occupy his position by the suffrages of the good people of this city. He don't represent us. We don't know as it makes any difference who holds our city warrants. A debt owed to a rich man is as binding as one to a poor man. Many holders of these warrants have taken them as a matter of accommodation to those to whom they were issued. Our police officers and laborers cannot wait two and three years for pay.

But it is claimed that the law requires that the treasurer should act according to the resolution. It is an old adage, that a little law is dangerous, and hence we think the city is in great danger. We will not attempt to give a legal opinion without more investigation. But from a cursory examination of the statutes, we found that county warrants were receivable for all taxes except state and special school taxes, and also that the county treasurer in collecting city taxes was to be governed by the laws on the statute books in relation to the collection of county and state taxes. The custom we have been pursuing has been pursued almost universally throughout the state. If we have been acting illegally, every other city and county in the state has also been acting illegally. The city council should have some regard for the honor, obligations and real interests of the city as well as for technical forms of law.

The council, it seems to us did this inconsiderately. Five members were present and only one of them opposed the proposed action. The other four did not oppose the resolution. This resolution ought to be repealed, and we think that it will be done when the council understands the real import of the resolution, the custom of other cities, and the public sentiment. An intelligent and proper regard for the city's honor and credit demands the immediate repeal of this resolution, and the true interests of the city also demands that any action in relation to the payment or repudiation of warrants should receive the most careful consideration. As a community our credit now stands high and we can't afford to barter this away so cheaply. The council meets next Monday night and we hope to record on the following morning that this offensive, dishonest, disastrous resolution has been repealed.

ANOTHER FAILURE.

By reference to our local columns, it will be seen that the flume over the Monument has given away. This was just completed at an expense of $500. Whether any of this amount can be saved remains to be seen. Who is responsible? When the flume was carried away, Alderman Rogers presented a plan for a new one, which he said was strong enough to bear up a freight train. Mayor France, and the rest of the council concluded to accept this plan as Alderman Rogers was a practical contractor.

Alderman Rogers has been very unfortunate in his public improvements. He supervised the construction of the $1,000 dam on the Monument that was washed away in May, 1878; and also was the leading member of the council that built the $2,500 bridge which was washed away by the same storm. There is danger of having altogether too practical men in the council. An expense of $35 in employing a competent person to draw a plan for the flume might have saved the city its heavy loss of yesterday. Without intending to be unjust, we think that the city affairs would be much better conducted if Alderman Rogers would take a less prominent part in the deliberations of the council. We understand he was most influential in raising the city tax to the extravagant amount of twelve mills, a subject we will speak of to-morrow.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1879.

BEIEGED BY INDIANS.

A Fight Somewhat Similar to Captain Payne's That took place Eleven Years ago.

One of the most remarkable fights in the annals of Indian warfare took place eleven years ago when congress having authorized the employment of frontiersmen against the Indians, then very troublesome, General George A. Forsyth, then and still upon Sheridan's staff, was selected to head an expedition of fifty picked men from the Kansas border. He set out from Fort Hayes August 29, 1868, Lieutenant F. H. Beecher, a nephew of the pastor of Plymouth, being second in command; Dr. John S. Movers, of New York, acting as surgeon, and H. J. Cull being first sergeant. After scouting eight days and seeing no Indians, though signs of their presence were everywhere, Forsyth reached Fort Wallace and proceeded to refit his command. On the 10th of September the Indians attacked a train near Sheridan, a small railroad town eighty miles from the fort, and Forsyth's party was sent after them. So closely did he pursue the savages that they broke into small squads, as is their custom, under such circumstances, and scattered. Having lost the trail, Forsyth pushed on to the Republican River, where he found a small war-party which grew constantly larger as he followed it till at last it became a broad and well-beaten road along which evidently large droves of cattle and of horses had been driven. No Indians, however, were to be seen.

At 5 o'clock on the evening of the eighth day out the command went into camp on the Arickaree. Fork of the Republican, which just at this point divided and surrounded a sort of island—a strip of sand and gravel about a hundred yards long, round which flowed the river, if that name can be applied to a stream then some eight feet and two or three inches deep. There was only one day's provisions left, but Forsyth, feeling that he was within striking distance of the hostiles, resolved to go on next day. At dawn of the morning the guard gave the alarm, "Indians!" and the frontiersmen started up, each grasping his rifle with one hand and his horse's bridle with the other, that the Indians might not stampede the animals. Six Indians dashed up, rattling bells, shaking buffalo robes and firing their guns; a few shots dispersed them, but the four pack mules had broken loose and galloped away with their precious loads. These horses that had only been hobbled escaping with them. Some of the men started out in pursuit of the Indians, but Forsyth, understanding that the stampede was only the prelude to an attack in force, ordered them back and bade all saddle up. They were still lightning the girls when Grover, the guide, placing his hand on the commander's shoulder, exclaimed excitedly: "Oh! heavens, General, look at the Indians!"

"Well, might he be excited," says Custer, who has so vividly told the story. "Over the hills from the west and north, along the river, on the opposite bank, everywhere and in every direction, they made their appearance. Finely mounted in full war paint, their long scalp locks braided with eagles' feathers, and with all the paraphernalia of a barbarous war party, with wild whoops and exultant shouts on they came." Forsyth instantly ordered his men to load their horses to the "island," and tie them to the few bushes that grew there in a circle, and lying on the sand within the line of animals sell their lives as dearly as possible. "I have begun the fight," the Indians in turn dismounting and crawling in the sand up to within a short distance of the island, to open at almost point blank range a galling fire on the party from Spencer and Henry rifles. So soon as it was daylight and the Indians could be distinguished it was found that they were surrounded by nearly a thousand warriors, Brules, Sioux, Cheyennes and Dog Soldiers.

The first care of the besieged was to trench themselves by throwing up with their knives little mounds in the form of a circle. Ere this work was accomplished two men had been killed and several wounded. Forsyth among them. A minie ball, striking him in the thigh, ranged upward and inflicted a very painful wound. A little while after, as he leaned forward to caution some men against firing too rapidly, another bullet struck him between the knee and ankle and shattered his left leg. At the same instant Dr. Movers, who the firing being too hot to allow him to attend to the wounded, had taken a rifle to aid in the defense, was shot through the head. The hills surrounding the fight were thronged with women and children, assembled to torture the captives they were confident of making, all chanting war-songs and filling the air with whoops and yells, while round the circle of fighting men rode the medicine men and chiefs, encouraging the warriors and cursing the frontiersmen for skulking like wolves.

If the scouts were now beginning to drop the Indians, the Indians' fire was telling on the encampment. There goes the last horse, anyway! one triumphant Indian shouted at 6 o'clock. Shortly after this about one hundred and twenty "Dog Soldiers," supported by some three hundred or more mounted men, mustered just beyond rifle-shot, and headed by the famous chief, Roman Nose, prepared to charge the scouts. "Superbly mounted, almost naked, although in full war-dress, and painted in the most hideous manner, furnished with a front of about sixty men, they awaited the signal of their chief to charge with apparently the greatest confidence." At his order the dismounted Indians poured in a tremendous fire upon the Americans, performing the part of artillery in silencing the fire of the besieged and preparing the way for the assaulting column. Says Custer:

"Seeing that the little garrison was stunned by the heavy fire of the dismounted Indians, and rightly judging that now, it ever, was the proper time to charge, Roman Nose and his mounted warriors, with a wild, ringing war whoop, leaped by the women and children on the hills, started forward. On they came, presenting even to the brave men awaiting the charge, a most superb sight. Soon they were within the range of the rifles of their friends, and of course the dismounted Indians to slacken their fire for fear of hitting their own warriors. This was the opportunity for the scouts. "Now," shouted Forsyth, and the scouts springing to their knees and casting their eyes coolly along the barrels of their rifles, opened on the advancing savages, a deadly fire. Unchecked, undisturbed, on dashed the warriors, steadily rang the clear, sharp reports of the rifles of the frontiersmen. Roman Nose fell dead from his horse. Medicine Man, killed, and for an instant the column, now within thirty feet of the scouts, hesitates—falters. A cheer from the scouts, who perceive the effect of their well-directed fire, and the Indians began to break and scatter in every direction, unwilling to rush to a hand-to-hand struggle. A few more shots and the Indians are forced back beyond range. Forsyth inquires anxiously, "Can they do better than that Grover?" "I have been on the plains, general, since a boy, and never saw such a charge as that before." "All right," then we are good for them."

In repulsing the savages the scouts had lost heavily, among the killed being young Beecher. The Indians kept up a continuous fire but by this time the minutest breastworks afforded a good shelter. At 2 o'clock and again at sunset they charged the scouts, but having lost their best leaders and being dispirited by the unexpectedly stubborn resistance, they were more easily beaten back each time with heavy loss. At dark they ceased firing and Forsyth could "take stock." Four men had been killed, four others were mortally and four severely wounded, ten others had received wounds of less gravity—in all twenty-three of fifty-one men had been hit. All his horses were killed, his supplies were exhausted, he was without medical stores, the Indians had completely invested him and the nearest post was 110 miles away. On the other side of the account he had beaten the Indians and had plenty of ammunition, water could be had by digging in the sand, and the carcasses of forty odd horses and mules stood for the commissariat. A well was dug, the wounded were made as comfortable as possible with blankets, the earthworks were strengthened with the dead animals and saddles and large quantities of horse and mule meat were cut off and buried in the sand. The scouts, Trudeau and Stillwell, the latter a slight, beardless boy of nineteen, were selected to run the gauntlet of the swarming Indians and carry dispatches to Fort Wallace, 110 miles distant, and crawling out into the sand as soon as it was dark were seen no more.

On the second day of the siege, no charge was attempted, but the Indians kept up as heavy a fire as possible to tease the scouts into using their ammunition, but the Americans were now well sheltered and only answered where a bullet was likely to tell. At night two more scouts were sent out, but failed to elude the vigilance of the Indians and were driven back to the encampment which played a gloomy look upon the probable fate of Trudeau and Stillwell. The Indians kept up the firing during the night, but about noon their women and children retired from the hills. A hopeful sign! Later they sent in a flag of truce for a parley, but the frontiersmen were too wary to be entrapped. That night Forsyth sent two more messengers, Donovan and Phley, with dispatches asking for assistance. "I am on a little island," the message read, "and have still plenty of ammunition left. We are living on mule and horse meat and are entirely out of rations. If it was not for so many wounded, I would come in and take the chances of whipping them if attacked. They are evidently sick of their bargain. I can hold out for six days longer if absolutely necessary, but please lose no time."

On the fourth day the main body of Indians departed, leaving a small investing force. The wounds of the injured were rudely dressed, shelters were constructed and soup made from horse flesh. On the sixth day, however, the first traces of gangrene set in, and the entire party was almost overpowered by the insupportable stench from the carcasses of the dead horses. Food there was none. Forsyth assembled the men and bade those who would go and leave the wounded and those who preferred staying in the camp and taking their chances of aid coming from the fort. All voted to stay together till the end. They lived on "putrid horse flesh" rubbed with gunpowder for two more days, on the 25th Colonel Carpenter, with the cavalry, came up from Fort Wallace, which Trudeau and Stillwell had reached in safety. "When he reached the island he found the defenders in the most pitiable condition, yet the survivors were determined to be plucky to the last. Forsyth himself, with rather indifferent success, affected to be reading an old novel that he had discovered in a saddle-bag; but Colonel Carpenter said his voice was a little unsteady and his eyes were somewhat dim when he held out his hand to Carpenter and bade him welcome to 'Beecher's Island,' a name that has since been given to the battle-ground."

Of the fifty-one men who went into the fight eight were killed, eight were disabled for life and twelve others were wounded. The Indians, who were seventeen to one, admitted subsequently a loss of seventy-five killed. N. Y. World.

Breaking of the Monument Plume.

The new plume across the Monument, which was built to take the place of the old one washed out by the water-spout, which caused the late railroad disaster, broke its own back yesterday morning and fell over towards the north into the creek, a mass of splintered and twisted timbers. Mr. E. L. Martin, who is employed on the ditches, was present when the plume tumbled down and narrowly escaped being precipitated into the creek with it.

We learned from him that the beavers have made it their business for the last week to erect a dam at the west end of the flume every night and Mr. Martin has made it his business to tear it down every morning. Yesterday morning he went over to the flume to see how the beavers were getting along. He found a pretty strong dam constructed in the usual place and proceeded to destroy it. Breaking a hole in it he returned across the flume to look after something at the east end. When he had concluded his work there he went back to the dam and finished its destruction. A good portion of the water that had been backed up had already passed through the flume but still there was a portion of it left which of course poured out when the dam was removed. Mr. Martin was making his way back over the flume when he heard the timbers crash and then felt them beginning to sink under him. He leaped forward and reached a firm foundation just as the new structure toppled over into the waters of the Monument.

He brought the news of the disaster to the town and yesterday afternoon Acting Mayor Williams, Alderman Rogers, Alderman Lyon and Ditch Commissioner France drove out to inspect the ruins. The north string piece was found to be broken in two places, and of course pulled out where it joined the rest of the structure. The brace of the south side was broken and one of the large iron rods twisted off. The whole of the centre span had gone down. The board of aldermen will inspect the flume in a body to-day.

Solemn and Impressive Services at the Presbyterian Church.

The Presbyterian church was crowded last Sunday evening upon the occasion of the installation of the Rev. T. C. Kirkwood, D. D., as pastor. The Rev. J. V. Cowhick, moderator of the presbytery, presided and proposed the constitutional questions. The services were impressive and solemn, and were listened to with the profoundest attention, although they occupied more than two hours and a half of time. The Rev. Willis Lord, D. D., preached the sermon taking his text from Rev. 1:20. The beautiful vision of the apostle, of the seven golden candlesticks, and the angel with the seven stars in his hand, was interpreted in a masterly manner and made to apply in its allegorical meaning to the church of the present and her ministers. The stars are the ministers who make bright the dark skies of our earthly life. The candlesticks are the churches, which uphold the light. The stars bright and glorious as they are do not shine of themselves but with the reflected light of the great central sun. The ministers ought to glow with the reflected radiance of the Sun of Righteousness, for if they endeavor to shine by their own light they will give forth but uncertain and feeble rays. The candlesticks in the allegory are spoken of as golden, so indeed ought the church to be. A golden church is the highest type of earthly perfection.

It would be impossible for us in our limited space to fully follow out the eloquent preacher's application of the allegory. The sermon was one of great beauty of construction and language, wonderfully comprehensive, pointed, practical and yet lofty in conception and masterly in its delivery.

The Rev. H. B. Gage, pastor elect of Pueblo, and formerly pastor of this church and well known to our citizens, made the installing prayer, which was impressive and touching.

The Rev. T. C. Bliss, D. D., of Denver, gave the charge to the pastor, and in the course of his charge he presented the following matters for consideration: 1st. That he should be careful of his bodily health, as one who had not come here to die but to live for Christ. 2d. To study the Word daily and to drink deeply therefrom. 3d. To preach the Word, illustrating it in his life and conversation. 4th. To drink deeply of the Holy Spirit. 5th. To watch the flock, especially those who should wander over the mountains, and to look tenderly after the lambs. 6th. To be strong in the Lord and to keep near the throne of grace.

The Rev. Charles C. Taylor gave the charge to the people, quoting as containing the essence of his charge: 1st. Thes. 5:12-13. His special charges were as follows: 1st. To know your pastor, not to visit overmuch his study but to ponder his sermons and thus learn to know his heart. 2d. To love him and that can not be a hard task to any who once look upon his kindly face. 3d. To give him an adequate and prompt support. 4th. To put yourselves under his leadership and to render loyal and ready assistance in church work. 5th. To give no countenance to rumor, to repeat no whispered word against him but to go to him with every charge. 6th. Not to feel neglected and neglected if he does not call upon you quite as often as you expected and finally to pray for him daily. "A praying people makes a preaching pastor."

At the conclusion of these very interesting services the audience rose and sang "Praise God from whom all blessings flow" and were then dismissed with the benediction, not to go home however until almost every one had taken the new pastor by the hand and wished him God speed in his good work.

Temperance Meeting at the Congregational Church.

The exercises at the Congregational church on Sunday evening were of a very interesting character. The audience filled the church. The service began by fifteen minutes of song from Gospel Hymns No. 3. After the invocation by Father Bristol. The pastor called upon Mr. Ratliff to show the danger of moderate drinking. The time occupied by the gentleman was well used. His illustrations were particularly forcible.

Prof. Lord read a well written article on "Alcohol as a Narcotic." The Professor showed that alcohol was a poison, that it gave to the system no stimulus, but rather created a temporary paralysis whenever it was taken into the body.

The next speaker took up the following eight minutes in "describing the effects of alcohol in the system. He began by a statement, "That alcohol, when once taken into the system goes through all parts of the body before any escape is given to it. At this point the congregation arose and sang "Where is my boy to-night?" Prof. Manning was the next speaker and in a fine and convincing manner showed the difficulty of drawing the line between moderate drinking and drunkenness. Mr. I. Holcomb gave some interesting facts which had come under his personal knowledge and made an earnest appeal to those present to avoid the use of strong drinks.

The pastor then made some brief remarks and presented some statistics showing that if only ten cents per day were spent for liquors in forty years the amount at compound interest would afford a comfortable competence with which we could ease the burden of old age. While the reverend gentleman was saying that he believed that whisky was ten cents per drink an audible whisper from some of "the boys" was heard to the effect that "it was twenty cents here." The meeting was quite a success. The remarks of the speakers were pointed and well received.

Proceedings of the Presbytery.

The Colorado Presbytery convened yesterday morning in the Presbyterian church and after devoting half an hour to prayer took up for consideration the report of the committee on church education and after a general discussion the report was adopted. A letter of credence was granted to the Rev. H. L. Janeway, who expects to be absent from the presbytery for some time. Elder Ortega was given a license to the ministry. The report of the committee on systematic benevolence was made by the Rev. J. G. Reid and was adopted with an added suggestion from Dr. Kirkwood that a committee of eight be appointed to present this matter to the consideration of the churches of the state. The committee was constituted as follows, each one being assigned the special subject annexed to his name: The Rev. J. G. Reid, of Boulder; chairman; the Rev. S. E. Bliss, of Denver, home missions; the Rev. H. B. Gage, of Pueblo, foreign missions; the Rev. John Wilson, of Longmont; education; the Rev. D. E. Einks, of Collins, publication; the Rev. T. C. Kirkwood, of Colorado Springs; ministerial relief; and the Rev. G. W. Partridge, of Canon City, freedmen.

The Rev. W. P. Teitsworth reported the organization of a church at Silver Cliff and requested that it be enrolled in the Presbytery. The request was granted. The Presbytery then adjourned for dinner.

The first paper presented in the afternoon was one by the Rev. Dr. Bliss upon the formation of a Presbyterian college. A committee was appointed to consider the matter, which committee consists of the Rev. Dr. Bliss, the Rev. Dr. Kirkwood, and Elder Blake.

The choosing of a place for the next meeting of the Presbytery was then discussed and Pueblo was chosen.

The delegates to the general assembly to be held next year in Madison, Wisconsin, were then chosen and among them was Mr. John Lennox, jr., of this city.

The following vote of thanks was passed unanimously:

Resolved, That the hearty thanks of the Presbytery are hereby tendered to the good people of Colorado Springs for their generous hospitality and kindness with which they have entertained the body during its deliberation in this city.

After the adoption of this resolution a prayer was offered by the moderator, a hymn was sung and the Presbytery dismissed with the benediction.

MEXICAN MISSIONARY ADDRESS.

The Rev. A. M. Darley delivered a missionary address in the Presbyterian church in the evening. The auditorium was crowded and the interest was sustained throughout the lecture. Mr. Darley has been laboring for the last year among the Mexicans of southern Colorado, making his headquarters at Del Norte. Before the lecture began Juan de Gomez and Jose Pablo Ortega, two Mexican elders of Mr. Darley's church sang a hymn in Spanish. The lecturer began his address with a brief description of the Mexican people among whom he is laboring. He described them as kind hearted and exceedingly polite whose mode of salutation is an embrace. The women are graceful and handsome. Their houses are of adobe with no windows upon the street but they are fancifully adorned within. Mirrors are greatly prized as mural ornaments and the speaker described one room in which he had observed as many as eight of them. Among the better class the women are well dressed in the fashion of twenty years ago, the hair is put up in the most simple manner and the maidens are exceedingly modest and reserved. The food of the Mexican is mostly boiled mutton and rice, peas and beans. Potatoes are seldom seen. The lecturer referred to the surprise of Elder Ortega at the first two story house he had entered which was within the last few days. "When he got in," said the speaker, "he didn't know how to get out. He is much impressed with the extent of your city and says there are much houses here." Ortega is a rich man, of great natural abilities and was licensed to the ministry by the present presbytery.

In speaking of the work to be done the speaker said that the great enemy to be overcome was Jesuitism. He spoke of the work done by the first protestant missionaries and also of what a mysterious man whom the Mexicans call "Solitario" had accomplished. This last mentioned person lived a peculiar life. No one knew from whence he came and died to this day no one knows where he died. He was a fierce foe to the Jesuits and it is believed that he fell by the assassin's hand. In referring to his own work Mr. Darley said, "I am the only missionary in Southern Colorado. My parish extends from two miles above Saguache to Las Animas and contains twenty thousand souls. There are 12,000,000 of these Mexicans who are I believe perishing for the bread of life. Do you say the worship of the Papal church is Christian? I tell you it is fetishism, the worship of mysteries, and nothing more. What we need among this people is personal work and the distribution of the Bible. These Mexicans are a religious people and if they read the Bible they will become Christians."

In concluding his address the speaker made a strong appeal to the women to volunteer in the missionary work, and said that he would remain in town until noon to-day to converse with any who might feel inclined to help in the good cause.

General Vinton's Death.

The death of General Vinton at Leadville has already been announced. His funeral took place last Sunday and was attended by unusual marks of respect. We give below a brief sketch of his life:

General Vinton was born in 1834, being 45 years old at the time of his death. In 1852 he entered the military academy at West Point, graduated in 1856, and entered the United States service, but resigned shortly afterwards and went to France, there entering the imperial school of mines at Paris, where he graduated four years after, in 1860. The war of the rebellion then broke out and General Vinton returned to America and offered his services to the United States. He was made captain of a New York regiment, and was commissioned colonel of one of the state organizations, and with that regiment he entered active service. In 1863 he was commissioned brigadier general and shortly afterward in the same year, was severely wounded and taken to Washington, and feeling that he could render no more military service, he resigned his commission. After his recovery he was, in 1864, tendered the chair of professor of mining engineering in the Columbia School of Mines, at New York City, which he accepted, and held until 1876, a period of twelve years. In the meantime he was sent to South and Central America to examine and report on mines in those countries. He resigned the professorship he held at Columbia College and came to Colorado in the interests of the Engineering and Mining Journal, of New York, and has been an active correspondent ever since. Shortly after his arrival in Colorado, he went into the employ of Messrs. Olmstead and Ballou, owners of the Silver Plume Reduction works, as superintendent of one of their mills in Clear Creek county. While in Colorado he was superintendent of the Mastodon mine in Boulder county, as well as a number of others. He first came from Georgetown to Leadville in January of this year where he has principally resided ever since. He was the expert witness in both of the Iron mine cases, in Denver, and exhibited great experience in those trials. He also testified in favor of the Colorado Central lode case, against the Equator mining company, of Georgetown, and to his testimony the Colorado Central parties owed their success in gaining the suit. He successfully demonstrated to the court and jury that the Colorado Central and Equator claims were on one lode, containing five distinct veins of ore between slickenside walls. While in Leadville he has been engaged about the Iron mine a great deal, having been retained by Messrs. Stevens & Letter in all their suits; he also had been retained in a number of important mining cases, one of which was the Little Chief mine. The last report that he made was a private report to the owners of the Tariff mine, located this side of Georgetown on Loveland's Pass, which, it is said, gave great satisfaction.
